A valid fishing license is required for all types of fishing on state waters. To fish in Montana, most anglers need two licenses: a Conservation License and a Fishing License.

A Conservation License is needed before you can buy any fishing or hunting license that Fish, Wildlife & Parks (FWP) issues. Conservation license applicants are required to provide their social security number in addition to the information usually requested. A valid driver's license or a valid photo ID is required to purchase a license.

A fishing license allows a person to fish for and possess any fish or aquatic invertebrate authorized by the state's fishing regulations. It is nontransferable and nonrefundable. The license enables one to fish from March 1 through the end of February of the following year.

Fly Fishing In Montana

Located in the heart of southwestern Montana, Twin Rivers Ranch is not just another 'fish in the pond'! With both the East Gallatin River and West Gallatin River flowing through our Ranch, this stretch of water can please the beginner and challenge the most skilled fly fisherman! From the feisty rainbows darting through the riffles to the big (really BIG) browns lying in the holes, these waters are the best kept secret in Montana!

The panoramic view of the majestic Rocky Mountains and gentle rolling foothills combined with the music of wildlife and melody of the water, makes for the experience of a lifetime. Our miles of meandering rivers, spring creeks, and streams are loaded with rainbow and brown trout of all sizes. During the summer months, trout are found feeding on a variety of adult insect life. Hatches of may flies, caddis flies, stone flies, and terrestrials occur throughout the summer offering the angler an opportunity to fish with a large variety of dry flies, nymphs, and streamers.

Mid-May through June: spring runoff highlights this period and we concentrate mostly on spring creeks and backwater, using nymph patterns and streamers. There is also opportunity for dry fly action. Pale Morning Duns and Midges are most abundant on cloudy days. The deer are bringing their fawns to the water's edge for their first drinks. Bald and golden eagles are soaring in our blue Montana skies, so bring along a camera; it's a must.

July is a prime time for dry flies: the famous salmon fly hatch is in full swing on most of the major rivers in the area. Mayflies, caddis, and stoneflies are abundant. Matching the hatch or using the larger attractor patterns provides opportunities to test your skills on trout of significant size. The days are hot and wet wading is a refreshing way to keep cool as you cast into the deep holes for the really big ones.

August: the trout are cruising the banks to feed on grasshoppers and beetles that fall into the water. Rainbows and Browns are ready to explode on 'hopper' patterns with a ferocity that will surely test your nerves. Floating or wading can offer very rewarding angling.

September through October: the crowds are gone, fishing is great, scenery is at its best, and wildlife is most abundant. Fishing streamers for trophy browns from a driftboat or walk-wading is an exciting adventure. Baetis hatches that occur on cloudy days are quite dependable and offer excellent dry fly angling. Terrestrials can be productive through most of September. Spawning season brings on the really big males that aggressively protect their territories and strike at anything that hits the water! On the water's edge, buck deer can be seen in the velvet and hunting season is just around the corner.

November through April is overlooked by many, but this is a great opportunity to fish Montana. Many waters remain open throughout the winter and can be comfortably fished wearing neoprene waders. Even though dry fly fishing is possible during the warmest days in the winter, nymph fishing is usually the most productive.

The Tennessee Walking Horse has impressed the nation with its docile temperament and smooth easy gaits. These quality characteristics have caused this breed to be in great demand all across the country. It serves nobly as an English or Western pleasure mount and has taken the young, the aged, the timid, as well as experienced riders along pleasant paths and trails.

Twin Rivers Ranch specializes in matching a horse to your needs in size, age, and ability. Horses are just as diverse as the people who ride them and we believe finding the right match is the key to a lifelong relationship between horses.

Show or pleasure, English or Western, trail or performance, Twin Rivers Ranch offers a well-rounded horse.

Attitude is paramount and our horses are carefully selected to assure a pleasant, willing disposition, sound confirmation, and well put together for a lifetime of enjoyment.

Our horses are imprinted at birth and handled lots and lots as weanlings. They are taught to be polite and respectful as they lead and stand tied. They are bathed, clipped, trailered and have their feet handled and trimmed on a regular basis. Then, as weanlings, they're turned out on hundreds of acres with their mamas and the herd to learn how to be horses. They navigate diverse terrain, establish balance, cross water, are exposed to abundant wildlife and learn common sense.

As two-year-olds, they are started under saddle, learn basic skills such as yielding to pressure, turning on the haunch and forehand, side passing and backing. A pleasant relationship is developed between horse and rider.

At three years old, they have lots and lots of trail miles added to their skill package and they are ready for placement in a home of their own.

Just like people, horses have strengths and weakness and diverse talents and abilities. At Twin Rivers Ranch, we carefully assess each animal and encourage it to achieve its maximum potential.

Choosing a horse is much more than picking a favorite color. If we don't have the perfect horse to fit your needs, we have a large network of reputable resources. We are willing to provide other recommendations as you search for the perfect match.

We encourage you to visit Twin Rivers Ranch. Talk with our knowledgeable staff and walk through our herd. Our horses are well maintained and are current on all vaccinations and worming. Their medical records and registration papers are available for review.
